John Robinson, CIO – comments about USRe implementation of Stingray:

- The Stingray Insurance Processing System is a true pioneer in claims and policy processing applications.
- The innovative design of the system is light years ahead of any other claims and policy application on the market today.
- We shopped over thirty other claims and policy processing applications and besides the cost, after we looked under the covers of their application the picture usually wasn't pretty.
- Another key factor in choosing Stingray was the professional design and support staff at Maximum Processing.
- Not only are they experienced in the development arena but (they) understand the insurance side of policy issuance, claims handling, and accounting.
- They helped us create a workflow that changed the way we do business and made it easier for our clients to do business with us.
- I'm confident that if you look at Stingray and compare it to the other applications on the market today that you will join the growing list of Stingray clients."
